Bio:

Up and coming Pop Country artist, Ava Terry, is on a mission. Locally grown in Phoenix, Arizona, this young singer/songwriter has big things on the horizon. Starting with winning her first singing competition at just 9 years old, Ava is now collaborating with Nashville producer/songwriter, Kipp Williams of Dr. Luke's Prescription Songs, to write her own music. She currently has 15 songs released on all streaming music platforms and is on track to release new music every 8 weeks.

Ava has released 4 official music videos to date. Her 1980's inspired release of "Time Machine", sparked the creation of a throwback music video that resonated with her fans generating over $350K views on Youtube and still continues to grow.

In her hometown, Ava is known for delivering a power-house version of the Star-Spangled Banner. Over the past 10 years, she has volunteered her talent to numerous charity organizations, like the United Way and the Kiwanis Foundation and has been asked to sing at Phoenix Suns and Arizona Diamondbacks sporting events. She also loves singing in her local church and performs at local venues whenever time permits. Ava decided after high school graduation to leave the comforts of her hometown and journey to Nashville where she is currently a student at Belmont University and continues to write and release music with her producer.
